

Workshop

The Labour Market in the Adriatic Macroregion

The role of the Post Secondary Vocational Educational Training

Thursday, August, 29th, 2013
9,30 – 12,30

Ancona
Mole Vanvitelliana

States belonging to the Adriatic Macroregion have been experimenting for about one decade intense streams of labour force. If the mobility of such labour force develops an important cultural "exchange" and economic relationships within the "geographical region", it doesn't seem to be supported by wider strategies at institutional levels, by concerted and agreed policies for education and professional training. The Adriatic Macroregion, within the VET system perspective, shows problems of mobility due to the lack of shared professional qualifications and consequently the lack of opportunities for citizens to transfer their own competences from a system to the other, as well as access easily to a Adriatic Labour Market.

The Objective of the Workshop is the analysis of the systems of Vocational Education and Training in the Adriatic area in order to build innovative shared professional training profiles , toward a Joint Adriatic Labor Market.

The workshop is organized in the context of DELMVET project - Developing an Efficient Locally Managed Model of Vocational Education and Training funded by Adriatic IPA CBC Programme. Project Code. 1°ord./0283/0.
